The Mariposa Amador Calaveras Tuolumne Health Board, Inc. (MACT) is a consortium of federally recognized and non-federally recognized tribes. MACT provides health care to Native Americans and the general public in five counties.

Health services funded by IHS were initially provided for Native Americans living on the Tuolumne Indian Rancheria through a one-time pilot project funded by a grant from the California Bureau of Maternal and Child Health in 1969. By 1971 Indian people in Tuolumne, Amador, and Calaveras counties petitioned to be added, and one health worker was hired in each county. In 1972 the Tuolumne Tribal Council passed a resolution to organize a Health Board and delegate governance to a Board of Directors. The Board would be comprised of two delegates from each county. In 1974 the American Indian Council of Mariposa County was added to the organization and Board. The organization received partial federal funding as a sub-contractor of the California Rural Indian Health Board (CRIHB).

In March 2013, The Jackson Rancheria band of Miwok Indians allowed MACT to negotiate directly with IHS, and the organization became a Title I contractor under PL 638. In March 2020, The Ione Band of Miwok Indians added a representative to the Advisory Board. In November 2021, Alpine County (except Markleeville) was assigned to MACT's Service Area.

There are currently six medical clinics, five dental clinics, one women's health, one optometry clinic, and integrated behavioral health services at all sites. The service area of 5,312 square miles is often accessed only through winding two-lane roads throughout the Sierra foothills. Travel from the northernmost clinic to the southernmost clinic takes approximately 2 hours.

John Alexander joined our organization on September 10, 2012. Mr. Alexander came to us from the central valley, where he ran Federally Qualified Health Centers, serving migrant farm workers and the uninsured. He received a Bachelor's Degree in Business and a Master's Degree in Business Administration from California State University, Stanislaus. John has worked in community health for over 20 years and is known for building strong healthcare organizations by driving positive change and building collaborative cultures. He is known for applying proven business strategies such as assessment, forecasting, and continuous process improvement to create healthy organizations. He has proven to be a positive influence and a tremendous asset to our team over the last ten years.
